

Armagh Robinson Library

Access Guide

Background to the Library

- Archbishop Robinson founded this Library in the heart of the City of Armagh in 1771. His aim was to share his own collection of books and fine art with the general public.
- Light from elegant windows lights up this classical library, lined from floor to ceiling with rare and beautiful books. The largest books are shelved on the lowest shelves, the smallest at the top. There are around 42,000 printed works, on subjects such as medicine, science, history, law, politics, theology and travel, as well as maps and atlases.
- On display are examples of the Library's many treasures, such as medieval manuscripts, incunabula (books printed before 1501), Jonathan Swift's copy of Gulliver's Travels containing notes in his own handwriting, and Archbishop Beresford's archaeological collection.

Opening Times

Car Parking

Visitors are welcome to park in the grounds of St Patrick's Church of Ireland Cathedral which is very close to the Library.

Your Arrival

You will walk through the gateway to the Library. At the front door you will see a buzzer on the wall. Please push this and a member of staff will speak to you and welcome you. The door can then be pushed open.

Toilet Facilities

When you enter the Library, toilet facilities will be located directly in front of you. A baby changing station is available.

Accessibility

To your left you will see a chair lift and a staircase which will enable access to the Library.

Accessibility

When you reach the top of the stairs there is a door which leads into the main room of the Library.

The Long Room

When you enter the Long Room, a member of staff will be there to greet you. Staff members wear badges to make them easy to identify.

The Long Room contains exhibitions under glass with text panels.

We ask you to find a member of staff if you are interested in looking at any of the books on the shelves. We wear white gloves when handling books.

The Library and No 5 are closed on Bank Holidays, Morning/Afternoon on the Hill group visits and special events.

Please check the calendar available on our website for special closures before making your journey.

We hope you enjoy your visit to Armagh Robinson Library!
